A word about our LAPASSAR newsletter, The Ladies Auxiliary Times. At the fall quarterly meeting in Duncansville, treasurer JoAnne Mengle who chaired the meeting asked for a volunteer to compose and disseminate a newsletter for LAPASSAR ladies, many of whom find it difficult to travel to meetings because of health or weather. I volunteered to take on that responsibility. I need your help, however, since this newsletter will only be as informative and engaging as news and pictures you send to me. Please send photos as jpeg. This newsletter is written in 12-point Calibri (body) which would be my preferred font for the text. You can send your submission to me (Janice Showler) at upenn92@verizon.net . The next deadline for the newsletter for our August quarterly meeting will be Friday, July 17th.

National Ladies Auxiliary Sons of the American Revolution (NLASAR) Spring Leadership Meeting: Louisville, Kentucky (Feb. 28-Mar 1, 2020)

Ladies met on Friday, February 28th at 10:00 a.m. on the 16th Floor Ballroom.

The meeting was called to order by President Billie Brock. The invocation was delivered by chaplain Cilla Tomme. Second vice-president Un Hui Yi led ladies in the pledge to NLASAR. Both the pledge to the flag as well as introduction of the speaker, Bill Stone, was delivered by first vice-president Linda Ashby.

Then the program was turned over to Bill Stone, Historian General, who provided a report on progress of the NSSAR Education Center and Museum. A walkthrough of the center will occur at 2021 Fall Leadership since plans are now completed and sent to an independent contractor. "We're going to outdo them [the Museum of the American Revolution in Philadelphia]." The center will have no fewer than 500 artifacts, many of which have been donated by SAR members. Some of the present artifacts include the following: Stone Lock and Part of Door from the Bennington Arsenal (William Stone), Screw Type Powder Horn (Mark and JoAnn Kramer), Salt Horn (Daniel McKelvie), Officer's Horn Cup and contributor to Bronze Swivel Cannon (M. Kent Gregory), Boarding Ax (Darryl Addington), Militia Dagger, British Coconut Water Ladle, Horn Whistle (Edmon McKinley), War Canteens and contributor to Bronze Swivel Cannon (Jim Maples), "Penny" Pocket Knife and Spider Skillet (Paul and Keitha Callanan), Naval Signal Mortar (C. Vets, Sr.), Eight-Tube Candle Mold, Brass Pepper Dredge, Ember Tongs, Brass Snuff Box, 18th Century Turned Wooden Goblet (Tony L. If you are interested in contributing to purchase of an artifact, contact William Stone, Historian General (bstonealsar@gmail.com or 334-497-0299), Zachary Distel, Program Exhibit Director and Curator (zdistel@sar.org or 502-588-6149) or Kent Gregory, Museum Board Chair (drkentgregory@earthlink.net or 562-826-7804. NLASAR President Billie Brock announced that the ladies will entertain a motion to contribute to the artifacts initiative at the 2020 Congress in Richmond, Virginia.

To see some of the artifacts and to understand the consistent diligent work of compatriots supported by wives and significant others, watch the following presentation: https://youtu.be/wh3Z3_9ECuc . During this 2020 Spring Leadership meeting, Solid Light presented an updated model of the future NSSAR Education Center and Museum. The presentation displays an important next step in SAR's outreach to the community and preservation of the history of this nation. The NSSAR Education Center and Museum has been over twenty years from its inception at the old headquarters, six blocks south of the Brown Hotel to these final plans. How wonderful to be a part of such a worthy venture in telling our country's history!

After Bill's presentation, President Billie Brock asked for reports from officers. Carolyn Payne, secretary, provided copies of minutes from the Fall Leadership meeting. These were read and approved by members.

Treasurer Mary Addington delivered the treasurer's report. At present, there is $12, 626.24 in the NLASAR treasury. Dues are still $5.00. Members of state societies contribute $5.00 to their state auxiliaries, and that fee makes them automatic members of not only their state ladies' auxiliaries but also NLASAR

Parliamentarian Pat Perkins provided information about a projected by-law change which will be voted on at the 2020 SAR Congress in Richmond, Virginia. That change would open membership to those significant others of compatriots who do not qualify for NLASAR through marriage or bloodline. These ladies will be eligible to join after the by-laws are changed. The wording of the change will be posted on the SAR national website. While not yet posted, please consult the website (<http://www.nlasar.org/>) before Congress so that you are informed to cast your vote. Many ladies, including President Billie Brock, believe this change is long overdue.

Third vice-president Nancy Alter announced that she would collect dues after the meeting and offered her expertise to any lady who would like information about forming a state ladies' auxiliary.

Chaplain Cilla Tomme encouraged all ladies to sign several cards for those who have faced health and other challenges since last meeting. These included a sympathy card for Nancy Horn for the passing of her husband, Howard, former PG (Delaware), former First Lady, Theresa Wilcox who recently underwent foot surgery, former Librarian General, Michael Wells, battling glioblastoma, former PG and First Lady Roland and Norma Downing who are both facing health challenges, and Vice-President General David Schrader (MA and dual member of PA), recovering from a stroke. Apologies for anyone I missed. Please contact Cilla if you know of anyone who needs support and well wishes. She can be reached at gacoloniallady@gmail.com

St. John’s Church, Richmond: “Where History Comes Alive”

A visitor writes: “Sundays, during at least part of the summer, St. John's Church puts on a reenactment of Patrick Henry’s plea for forming a militia. Pendleton retorted his requests and was joined by others. The Kings ministers are evil, not the King. This will be ok if we just wait. We do not want conflict with our King. We are not prepared. Finally, Patrick kind of loses it, 18th Century style, and goes through everything they have done to solve the issue peaceably. He then goes into why his detractors want to avoid a war, there are troop-laden ships in American harbors. America faces no outward threat - those troops are here for us. The war had already started. I am not even close to giving this play justice because by the end of it I am ready to go to war too”

Featured speaker for the First Lady's Luncheon was Venie Hinson whose presentation was entitled "The Impact of the American Revolution on Women's Roles." In her presentation, Venie, who also serves as NLSAR historian, argued that because women were left to handle farms and businesses while their husbands fought in the American Revolution, they developed self-confidence and self-determination, putting to rest the notion of being feeble in mind and spirit. Un Hui Yi was honored with a gift from First Lady Shelia Manning for her tireless efforts at fund-raising for the SAR. Congratulations, Un Hui!

Banquet Speaker: Friday, February 28, 2020—David Armitage, Harvard University

Biography: Professor Armitage served as 2019-2020 SAR Visiting Professor at King’s College, London. He is the Blankfein Professor of History and former Chair of the Department of History at Harvard University where he teaches intellectual and international history. Educated at Cambridge and Princeton Universities, he is the author of eighteen books including The Declaration of Independence: A Global History which he had available for sale after his presentation, entitled George III and the Law of Nations. He began his presentation with an analogy of the American Revolution to the Viet Nam War whose “Declaration of Independence of the Democratic Republic of Viet Nam (September 2, 1945) he includes as a chapter in The Declaration of Independence: A Global History referred to above. He argued that before 1780, international law did not exist as a construct. He then deconstructed some of the mythology surrounding George III, especially the notion that he was simply that “mad” king whose offenses against the colonists. Interestingly, Armitage argues, “No one was as well-educated as George III.” He was a radical critic of the slave trade. Only Wallace, a Scotsman, professed a more radical view against that “peculiar institution.”

Professor Armitage grounded his comments with the “indictment” of King George in the American Declaration of Independence, arguing that this indictment was based on principles of the law of nations, that is, claiming that George had acted contrary to the law of nations. Despite these grievances, Professor Armitage, through evidence from the Royal Archives at Windsor as well as the Royal Library, showed that the king not only was well-educated in the law of nations, but also “. . . placed importance on the study of history, the law of nature and nations, the civil law, and the municipal law.” George III had been well-prepared and well-educated for his role as king and was aware both of his prerogative and of his authority under the law of nations. Professor Armitage showed how the young Prince George had assimilated and made his own Montesquieu’s arguments against slavery, leading him to produce in the 1750s an account of the law of nations, under the title, “Of Laws Relative to Government in General,” by incorporating a radical abolitionist argument that was influenced by both Montesquieu and Blackstone.

Banquet Speaker: Saturday, February 29, 2020—Seanegan P. Sculley

Biography: Professor LTC Sculley will serve as the SAR Distinguished Scholar for 2020 SAR Annual Conference on the American Revolution and will speak about “Interpreting Independence: The Declaration through the Generations.” He earned his Ph.D. in history from the University of Massachusetts, Amherst. He has served as both instructor and assistant professor of history at the United States Military Academy. Currently, he serves as an academy professor and division chief for the American Division in the Department of History at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, New York. He is the author of Men of the Meanest Sort: Military Leadership and War in the New England Colonies, 1690-1775 (2008) and Contest for Liberty: Military Leadership in the Continental Army, 1775-1783 (2019) as well as numerous articles, essays, and book chapters.

Sculley’s topic for this event was “Contest for Liberty: Military Leadership in the Continental Army, 1775-1783.” He began his presentation by asserting that the focus of the military has historically been on tactics rather than the relationship between officers and soldiers. Before the American Revolution, there existed a rich military tradition in the colonies with such provincial forces as those in Massachusetts and Connecticut. The Continental Army was redesigned by “classing”—that is, the process by which younger men took on roles of the older men. Officers gained experience in rank but not necessarily socially.

Sculley further argues that it was not only officers such as George Washington who determined who deserved to lead and under what conditions, but also soldiers as well. Therefore, military authority was culturally negotiated between both officers and soldiers of the Continental Army: an “unknown concept at the time [but] what we call leadership today] (back jacket of Contest for Liberty). Finally codified in General Friedrich Wilhelm’s von Steuben’s The Regulations for the Order of Discipline of the Troops of the United States in 1779, this negotiation resulted in military leadership recognizing the autonomy of individual soldiers and redefining the concept of honor and leadership.
